

people become aware of him, who will receive some of these calls that he is going to decide had better be kept confidential because they will start by saying, Senator Bromm, based on what you said or what you've done, I feel like I can talk to you. His only alternative is going to be to say, well, I don't think you ought to talk to me because I don't think that these calls ought to be kept confidential, but Senator Bromm won't do that. He will come to the same realization that Senator Hohenstein did, that we do get calls that should be kept confidential, and I don't know if Senator Bromm will go as far...

PRESIDENT MOUL: Time.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...as Senator Hohenstein, but he said he would go to jail with us before he would reveal his. Madam Chair, I am going to withdraw that amendment.

PRESIDENT MOUL: Thank you, Senator Chambers. The amendment is withdrawn. Before we proceed, I would like to call the senators' attention to the south balcony. Special guests today of Senator Byars are 50 fourth grade students from Paddock Lane School in Beatrice, accompanied by their teachers. Would you please rise and be recognized. Welcome to the Chamber. We will now return to debate on the Landis amendment. Senator Moore, you are first. Senator Moore.

SENATOR MOORE: Madam President and members, we are back to the Landis amendment now? Obviously, this entire issue is one of those issues that all of us that do go home to our districts hear a great deal about and hear a lot of conversation about, there is no doubt about that. But I guess I am sitting here this morning reminded of...it's not too popular to quote George Bush in this day and age, obviously, but...or sometimes never with many people, but I am reminded of a time George, when he was in Congress, in the early sixties, when he went home to the district in Texas, on a civil rights issue that he was voting for a civil rights bill, which was something less than popular in that district, and he used the Edmund Burke quote about the job of an elected official is to exercise their judgment, their convictions. If they sacrifice either of those to your opinion, they betrayed both of us. If they sacrifice either of those to your opinion, they betrayed both of us. I am sure there are some members of the body that their judgment and conviction tells them that Senator Landis's amendment is the right thing to do. I know there are many others that it's strictly public
