But, members, please try to stay close to the Chamber, we would like to finish up this group of bills on Select File if we can. We will now work on the second half of the amendment. Discussion on the second half of the amendment. Senator Hohenstein.

SENATOR HOHENSTEIN: Mr. Speaker, members, I have a couple questions to just try to understand, and I hope I'm on the right part of the amendment. I'm just concerned and I guess I just need to have some response whether a person, for instance, who catches fish and sells the same out of the Missouri River which is in both the State of Iowa and the State of Nebraska, probably impossible to determine where the fish originate, could be prohibited from doing that under the rules and regulations which might be developed. A common occurrence, a person does this, sells them locally for fish fries across the State of Nebraska,
