it, I'll kick it for you. I'll even kick Senator Chambers' ticket for...or hall...or butt for him if he wants it kicked. But that has nothing to do with recommitting the bill, I guess. I'm just using up time...oops...

PRESIDENT ROBAK: One minute.

SENATOR HABERMAN: Just about just turned my light on. I get to speak three times. Thank you, Madam Chairman. (Inaudible) on this first...second time. We heard Senator Hall say that the members of the committee, five of them voted yes. I talked to one member of the committee and he told me, personally, he didn't know what he was doing. Didn't understand, and he would have voted no, so that gives them a four vote, Senator Hall. It wouldn't have gotten out of the committee. So don't stand there and...and tell us that...well, you could tell us your opinion, anything you want to and...but I'm not going to take your opinion for granted anymore. I'm sorry about that. I'm sorry that the session's going to end because I could really be on your case more than I can now, in the last three or four days. But, to go on, it says more than 5,000 while extremists dressed in khaki and packing guns...

PRESIDENT ROBAK: Time.

SENATOR HABERMAN: ..burned the flag of the new South Africa and swore Saturday to fight for an independent whites only state.

PRESIDENT ROBAK: Thank you, Senator Haberman.

SENATOR HABERMAN: You're welcome.

PRESIDENT ROBAK: You're the next speaker.

SENATOR HABERMAN: Thank you, Madam Chairman. I've never had such attention. The quietness just thrills me. Usually, it's so noisy in here you can't hear what you're saying. But I'm glad to see my friend, Senator Hall, sitting over there eating crackers and drinking warm...warm water because I...I may get some conversation out of him yet. There...you got something else to say, Senator Chambers, or Senator Hall? Senator Pedersen, are you leaving us? Well, let's go on here and talk some more. It says two of South Africa's four provinces, plus a part of northern Natal, to provide a corridor to the Indian Ocean. Johannesburg, the largest city in Transvaal, would be
